

Richard Burton

ricburton

ricburton

i@rb.cm

2014

Blurtit

Blurtit.com is one of the largest independent Q&A websites on the internet. I'm working with their team to design their iPhone app.

2013

Co-founded sourcing.io, a tool for finding software engineers. Built the business to $10,000+ in monthly revenue. Buy-out negotiations ongoing.

sidebench

A fellow hacker schooler was building an iPhone app for Sidebench Studios. I worked with him to create the backend using Sinatra.

Attended batch[5] of Hacker School in New York where I spent my time playing with Sinatra and getting to grips with Objective-C.

2012

stripe

I worked as part of the growth team, recruited a friend as a teammate, and signed up some large enterprise clients.

WOODHOUSE

Woodhouse Clothing were digging through Google Analytics every day to get answers to a few basic questions. I worked with them to create a simple sales dashboard that gave them all information they needed.

BANKIO

Worked as a freelancer where I built an integration between an SMS payments service and a cable network's subscription system using Ruby.

2011

UCSB

Completed a one-year course in accounting and investment analysis.

2008

hoodeeasy

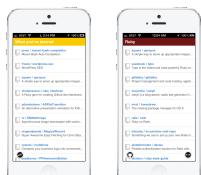

I built hoodeeasy.com to help groups of students order custom clothing. As the site grew, I hired an employee and worked with other developers to write tools to automate the business. We sold over 50,000 sweatshirts in three years and were acquired by a competitor.

2007

Graduated from Norwich School, UK with 8 A*'s at GCSE and 3 A Levels.

Other

Repo is an iPhone app to help developers discover interesting new repositories on GitHub. You can get it for free at: appstore.com/repo Outside work, I love to kitesurf. I won the 2011 student competition in the UK and landed the best trick at the 2012 nationals.